Cuban exiles say the State Department's Latin American crowd is grooming leftwinger Manolo Ray to head the US-based Cuban Revolutionary Council. A socialist, identified with the slogan "Fidelism with Fidel," Ray was booted out of both the ship of his own and Castro parties in Miami July 10, 1961. He is considered a good friend of Teodoro Moscoso, head of the Alliance for Progress program, and is reported to have the backing of Richard N. Goodwin, the young, highly influential Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs.
